

Presumptive Eligibility

a program for pregnant women

“Reminder of Your Responsibility”

You’ve taken the first step—don’t lose your coverage now!

Approval for Presumptive Eligibility (PE) IS NOT the same as being approved for Medicaid. Your PE coverage is only temporary while you submit a Medicaid application and your Medicaid application is pending. Your PE will be discontinued if you do not apply for Medicaid by the last day of the month following the month your PE was established.

It is very important that you respond promptly to all requests from the state regarding your Medicaid application process following your submission of a Medicaid application. If you do not apply and respond, you will not be eligible for Medicaid coverage and you will be responsible for paying all of your labor and delivery costs. This can be very expensive!

Many healthcare services are not covered under PE. If you do not begin the Medicaid application process, you will lose your PE and be responsible for cost of the care when you are admitted to the hospital, including labor and delivery, and any services that are not for your pregnancy or for the health of your baby. The costs of your continuing prenatal care, as well as labor and delivery, will only be covered if your Medicaid application is submitted and approved.

For your health and the health of your baby, take the next step and complete the Medicaid application process right away. The same doctor’s office or clinic that helped you with your PE determination can help in filling out and submitting your Medicaid application.
